How I Can Further the Message of Martin Luther King Jr.

Martin Luther King Jr. had a distinctive and inspiring dream. A dream “that one day little black boys and little black girls will be able to join hands with little white boys and little white girls as sister and brothers.” Everyone is equal, blacks and white should be treated the same, and people should not ostracize other because of their skin color, religion, or nationality. This was Martin Luther King Jr’s message. He spread it throughout the nation and made a difference; however, what he said did not impact everybody. Even today, there are people who are treated unjustly because of their skin color, religion, or nationality. This is where we come in. We all need to help spread Martin Luther King Jr’s message of fairness and equality amongst everyone.

All of our actions should reflect what Martin Luther King Jr’s message stated. We should treat all people fairly. We should get to know people for who they are, not for the color of their skin, or anything else. Although it is not uncommon for people of the same race to hang out together, we should accept people of all races as our friends and let nobody feel left out, because truly, we are no different. I do not understand how people can exclude others. People cannot choose their race or ethnic background; therefore, why should they be punished for something that cannot help or change? And everyone has different beliefs religiously, but that doesn’t mean we should not associate with them. Both blacks and white have made significant contributions throughout our nation’s history and continue to do so today. Why can’t we all just have enough toleration for people of all races? There is room for all of us on this earth; if there weren’t, God wouldn't have put us here together. God made no one alike in the sense that we all look, act, and think differently, but he also created everyone to be equal. We all eat, sleep, breathe, cry, and bleed the same way. We all feel distressed when we are left out, but no one should have to feel this way. If we could learn to appreciate each other, then life would be so much easier for everybody. Imagine a world where no one was detested, especially because of his or her race. If people could just learn to accept others for who they are, the world would be a much better place. We must be the change we want to see in the world, so let us all start to make it a better place by treating everyone equally.
